

A diagnosis of congestive heart failure (CHF) was confirmed based on elevated B-type natriuretic peptide (BNP) levels and echocardiogram findings showing a reduced ejection fraction of 35%. The treatment plan involves diuretics to manage fluid overload, an ACE inhibitor to improve cardiac function, and lifestyle modifications including a low-sodium diet.