

A 4-year-old child presents with a high fever, cough, and coryza. Examination reveals Koplik's spots on the buccal mucosa, pathognomonic for measles (rubeola). Public health reporting is mandatory, and supportive care is the primary treatment.