

None

A patient was diagnosed with deep vein thrombosis (DVT) after presenting with unilateral leg swelling and pain. A Doppler ultrasound confirmed the presence of a clot in the popliteal vein. Treatment has been initiated with low-molecular-weight heparin, bridging to long-term warfarin therapy to prevent pulmonary embolism.